“The school is brilliant, and the children are really happy there. It has high standards and good discipline. Both pupils and teachers show a lot of respect for each other. The children are really proud of their school.”

Foreword

Welcome to the latest edition of the Parents' Guide to BSA State Boarding Forum Schools.

At a recent meeting in the House of Lords, Alex Foreman, Principal of The Duke of York's Royal Military School and Chair of the State Boarding Forum (SBF) for 2025–26, captured the unique value of state boarding, describing the sector as “quietly transforming lives across Britain, yet still one of the best-kept secrets in education.”

Today, 29 state boarding schools operate across the UK, each with its own character and community. Boarding numbers range from fewer than 50 pupils to more than 600, yet all share a defining feature: families pay only for the residential element - accommodation, meals and pastoral care - while the education itself is fully state-funded. This makes state boarding a markedly more affordable option compared with the independent sector.

Affordability, however, is only part of the story. State boarding schools consistently deliver strong academic outcomes and exceptional pastoral support. On average, pupils achieve around half a grade higher per subject than pupils nationally, with markedly more attaining Grade 5+ in English and Maths. Most importantly, more than 90% of state boarding parents say their child is happy boarding and would recommend both their school and the boarding experience to others.

Members of the State Boarding Forum (SBF) represent enormous diversity. You'll find schools of all sizes, in cities and in rural locations, offering a wide range of specialisms, outstanding extra-curricular opportunities and academic results that stand alongside the very best in the country. Behind these achievements are dedicated, highly skilled staff who work tirelessly to support the wellbeing, growth and success of every boarder. Their practice is underpinned by the Government's National Minimum Standards for Boarding in England, ensuring high-quality provision across the sector.

Director, BSA*

Why choose an SBF school?

There are many reasons for choosing a state boarding school for your child. Here are just a few:

Excellent education

All state boarding schools and academies follow the National Curriculum and pupils take the same exams as they would in a state day school. Whilst the exams are the same, the performance exceeds that of many other schools with state boarding schools frequently featuring at the top of league tables. This applies to both selective and non-selective schools. Some state boarding schools offer the International Baccalaureate in the sixth form.

Top quality boarding facilities

The boarding facilities are indistinguishable from those at independent schools. Following investment in recent years many schools have new boarding houses with modern facilities and all are supported by staff who are totally committed to the well-being of the children. By selecting a state boarding school parents are choosing the very best boarding care.

“My sons had a fantastic range of courses to choose from at GCSE and A Level”

Parent

Affordable boarding education

When you can get top quality, education combined with state-of-the-art boarding facilities it is easy to see why so many parents choose state boarding education for their children. Boarding fees are similar to those at independent schools. However, because tuition is free the total cost is much lower at SBF schools, while standards of care, education and facilities compare very favourably to private schools. State schools are also out of the scope of VAT.

Wide choice of schools

Parents will usually find a school that meets their requirements – however specific they are. There are selective schools and comprehensive schools; co-ed and single-sex schools; primary schools, secondary schools and sixth form colleges; specialists in many different subjects; predominantly boarding or minority boarding. The schools are spread throughout England.

SBF schools offer a diverse educational experience and include Prep/Junior, Boys' and co-ed (there are not any Girls' schools), selective (Grammar) and non-selective, academies, sixth form colleges and senior schools with sixth form.

Frequently asked questions

Who can be a boarder at a state boarding school?

State boarding schools welcome children from all backgrounds. They can admit UK pupils. Children from outside the UK need to have the right of residence in the UK before they can be accepted as boarders.

Please note that the holding of a BN(O) passport does not make the child eligible for a State Boarding School in the UK.

What is a state boarding school?

A state school, free school, or academy which provides boarding for at least some of its pupils. Boarding fees are low because whilst they cover the cost of providing the boarding place; the school, like every state school in England and Wales, does not charge for education.

What is it not?

It is not a residential school, Borstal, approved school, special needs school or 'military school' in the American sense of being a 'boot camp' for children who lack discipline or have behavioural difficulties. In fact, it is pretty much like an independent boarding school in most respects.

How many state boarding schools are there?

There are 31 SBF schools but only 29 have decided to be included in this publication. Of these two are sixth form colleges.

Several schools now have academy status, and more will surely follow, but this status makes no difference to pupils within the schools, or to parents considering applying.

How much will a state boarding place cost me?

This will vary from school to school – geography influences the school's own costs – and from year to year – sixth form places may be slightly more expensive than the younger years. Schools charge fees to cover the cost of providing boarding and vary between about £10,000 and £17,000 per year. Prices are not listed here because they will change every year.

Why are the fees low?

Because the schools are not charging for teaching at all – in the UK, education provided by the state is free at the point of access and state schools are not permitted to charge for tuition.

Is there a centralised system for applications?

No. If you live in England and will be applying for a place at a state boarding school at the normal time when children transfer to secondary school in your local authority area, you will need to apply to the school of your choice and also need to apply to your home local authority. Otherwise you simply apply to the individual school.

When should I apply?

For admission in any September, apply from the previous September. Be ready to do so as early in September as possible and you MUST do so by the national closing date at the end of October if you are applying for a Year 7 (11+) place. This will mean enquiring and visiting and making choices in the summer term of the year preceding entry. For entry at age 11, successful applicants will be notified they have a place on the Common Admission Date, 1 March preceding the September of entry. Schools will have different numbers of pupils for day places and for boarding places, but all are notified on the same date.

State boarding places in sixth forms are particularly popular, so early application a year ahead of admission is sensible. For application 'in year' for whatever reason, it is always worth asking the school in which you are interested does it have a space in class, and does it have an available bed in boarding. If they do, they may be able to make a swift admission at any time of the year.

Do I have to live in the school's catchment area?

No, not for a boarding place – for boarders, effectively there is no catchment area.

Do any of them take Junior boarders

Yes, at least two to do and please see details of individual schools in this publication.

If my child becomes a boarder, will they be gone for months on end?

Most state boarding schools will have an 'exeat' (home leave) weekend every three weeks, in addition to the usual half terms. Increasingly, they are providing weekly boarding, with boarders at home for weekends, if that is what families prefer. Please enquire of the school you choose what their pattern is. If you wish your child to be at school at the weekend, ask about their programme of weekend activities.

Are there any girls' only schools?

No.

Will one of these schools be as good as an independent boarding school?

In terms of pastoral care, yes. In terms of activities, almost certainly. In terms of facilities, probably. Many of them are extremely high-performing schools academically. Class sizes are likely to be larger than they would be in the independent sector. But every school, whether independent or state boarding, is different, so check out your choices carefully.

Who can apply for a state boarding place?

- A citizen of the UK
- A British passport holder who may live abroad
- A student with 'Right of Residence' in Britain – e.g. if they have a parent with right of residence here for work purposes.

Will I need to pay VAT on boarding fees?

No, state schools are outside the scope of VAT.

Helpful information

SBF schools are not licenced to support students who require a child or student visa to study in the UK.

'Right of residence' does not arise because a child attends a boarding school in Britain, it must be held before a place can be offered.

Holding a British National (Overseas) passport does not automatically make the child eligible for a place at a state boarding school, however, they may be legible if the child and parent(s) are resident in the UK.

If my child does not get a place, what then?

Every school will have and publish an Appeal Procedure.

Can I take a boarding place then change it for a day place?

No. Schools have separate admission numbers for their day and boarding populations. Transfer is not an easy process. To take a boarding place and wish to transfer to a day place is to deprive another applicant of a boarding place.

Will the school make the most of my child's academic potential?

State Boarding Schools have a very good record of academic results at both GCSE and A Level/IB, and in most state boarding schools, the majority of leavers go on to university. However, the most important thing is how the school matches your child's profile and aspirations; not all children want to go to university or are suited to doing so. Look carefully at school data on results and destination of leavers for further guidance.

Do any of them offer IB?

Yes, a number do and please see details of individual schools in this publication.

So how do I choose a school?

Some things to consider do you want:

- A large school or a small one
- A big community of 650 in one of our colleges, or a small one offering as few as 30 boarding places
- A school close to where you live – most boarding parents these days live within an hour's journey of the school so they can attend matches and plays etc.
- Admission into Y7, Y9, or the sixth form
- A school with something specific in addition to what a school would normally provide – e.g. very strong sports or music or drama for instance.

With these questions in mind, look on the SBF website www.stateboarding.org.uk and into schools' own websites to get the feel of the schools. Then visit your 'top schools'. Involve your child in the selection process. He or she will be asked if they really want to be a boarder and the school you choose together will be their home for several years – it is important that it feels right for them.

SBF cannot advise on individual choices of schools.

“The sixth form is outstanding: students attain high grades at A-level and leave school very well prepared for further study or training.”

Ofsted

“The teachers are nice, and the school provides a peaceful, calm environment.”

Benefits of Boarding

Modern boarding is a flexible option with many state boarding schools offering weekly as well as termly boarding. Boarding has many benefits:

- Plenty of home comforts and a warm welcome
- They help children to develop confidence and independence
- Boarders have the best of both worlds – a ready-made circle of friends in their boarding house and the chance to mix with local children
- They provide continuity and stability, for example for children whose parents' work involves frequent changes of location or where parents work long hours

- They offer a range of worthwhile evening and weekend activities

By visiting some schools with your child, you will be able to choose the most suitable one. All schools have arrangements for helping new boarders to settle in and the great majority of boarders get used to their new surroundings very quickly. However, if any do experience problems, help is always at hand.

Boarding in the sixth form is a popular option for many pupils as it is an excellent preparation for university life or employment away from home. Many state boarding schools have sixth forms and there is also the option of a further education college.

"It's like one big sleepover for the children with their extended family; and their learning is fun."
